

Georgian (No.1611), by Fenton

Made by Fenton Glass Company, Georgian was introduced as “Agua Caliente”. It was made between 1930-1935 in a variety of colors: irresistible and fascinating Ruby, with its glow of life and warmth; rich Royal Blue; semi-opaque Jade Green; mirror-black Ebony; sparkling Crystal, delicate Rose; Pale Green; Alluring Amber and Topaz. The catalog reprint shows four sizes of footed goblets: 10 oz goblet, 6 oz high sherbet, 4 ½ oz claret, 2 ½ oz cocktail. Also shown is a 9 oz footed tumbler and a 1 oz footed cordial. There are four sizes of flat tumblers: 2 ¾ oz whiskey, 5 oz orange juice, 9 oz table tumbler, and a 12 oz ice tea. Plates range in size from a 6 3/8” bread and butter, 7 3/8”, 8 ¼”, 9 5/8” and a 10 5/8” compartment plate. Additional table pieces are a finger bowl and plate. One piece included in the set, which we do not have, is a footed nut cup. Serving pieces include a ½ gal jug, salt and pepper shakers, creamer and sugar, 21 oz decanter, a 24 oz cocktail shaker. We have an unlisted 8” bowl and a small footed ruffled nappy, also unlisted.

Other companies also made a Georgian pattern including Cambridge (2 ½ oz, 9 oz and 12 oz tumblers and a footed sundae; referred to as “Hotel and Tea Room Glassware); Duncan and Miller (crystal, green, amber and rose; creamer and sugar, goblet); Hazel Atlas (5 oz and 9 oz tumblers in pink, green, crystal and some in Ritz blue); and Hocking (5 sizes of flat tumblers, sherbet, decanter and pitcher in crystal and green).

Cambridge tumblers have a four-sided diamond in the middle, while most of the other companies have a hexagon in the middle; both the Fenton and Cambridge tumblers have ground bottoms. The Duncan and Miller goblet, which has a similar shape to the Fenton, has a four-sided diamond also. The creamer and sugar in Duncan, the pitcher and decanter in Hocking are shaped differently from the same Fenton pieces.
